

Law enforcement officers are 54% more likely to die by suicide than the general American population.

Help treat the system, not just the officer.

Join us at The Howard C. Liebengood Foundation Symposium: The Evolving Law Enforcement Landscape & the First Responder Mental Health Crisis, a national symposium on the conditions that shape first responder mental health.

This inaugural symposium brings together law enforcement leaders, mental health and health care experts, researchers, and bipartisan policymakers to explore practical, evidence-informed solutions.

Presented in partnership with the Johns Hopkins Carey Business School.

Only 50 seats available for the day 2

From Conversation to Action Workshop

available exclusively to registered Symposium attendees

Translate two days of learning into an agency-specific plan.

$150 for two days designed
to produce results,
not just conversations.

WHAT YOU'LL TAKE BACK:

- Understand the specific environmental and organizational forces shaping officer stress, and what that means for how you lead, treat, or legislate.
- Move beyond surface-level explanations of officer mental health struggles and identify the systemic levers that actually change outcomes.
- See how the decisions made in the chief's office, union halls, and legislative offices either compound the crisis or start solving it — and where your role fits.
- Leave with practical strategies for implementing sustainable change initiatives that support officer wellness, organizational resilience, and healthy agency culture.
